Tips and Takeaways: Navigating Employment as an International Candidate Panel

- Be aware of basic work authorization requirements based on your visa status. It helps you understand the process of hiring as an international candidate in the U.S. and better plan your US job search. To learn more about these regulations, contact a career advisor at Cornell Career Services and ISSO advisor. You are not alone in this process!
- Remember to consider what is a life that you want to have beyond finding a job in the U.S. because it indeed impacts your career choice about whether or not stay in the U.S.
- International candidates shouldn’t be afraid of telling an employer that you need a sponsorship because you have unique skills and values that you can bring. Be confident about what you have and present them to employers!
